

Important Decision.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in a decision, has announced the practice in the courts of this State, of making the value of Confederate treasury notes at the time the demand for their delivery was made, the measure of damages. The case was that of the Planters' Bank of Tennessee vs. the Union Bank of Louisiana, and the judgment of the court below, which was affirmed by the U. S. Supreme Court, was that the Planters' Bank ought not to be permitted to recover more than the damages sustained by it in consequence of the defendant's failure to deliver Confederate notes when they were demanded, and those damages are measured by the value of those notes in United States currency at the time when the demand was made and when the notes should have been delivered.—Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

Rev. W. H. Murray of Boston, who recently exchanged pulpits with Mr. Beecher, is every Summer a subject of newspaper gossip. He is a genuine sportsman and exceedingly fond of horses and dogs, of which he owns a considerable number. His wife shares his enjoyment of these pastimes. Of her and her sister's correspondent thus writes: Mrs. Murray, with her delicate features, clear complexion, hazel gray eyes, abundant brown hair, and slender figure, is one of the most beautiful women I ever saw. She is not only a "dead shot," a dashing "whip," a bold sailor, a clever artist, a dainty house-keeper, an attentive hostess, and a thoroughly good person, but she has the "sweet, attractive kind of grace" which the poet sings, and the low, soft voice which is so excellent a thing in woman. Mrs. Murray has a sister, Miss Ida E. Hull, bright, dark-eyed, in the prime of her teens, as handsome as a girl in a novel, and as good as a girl in a memoir. She can drive any horse in the place, is ready to trot with an orthodox clergyman, or run a race with a locomotive. She intends to go by, and has done it in both cases. She is, without like all persons who really understand horses, a careful driver. Whether her skill and daring are due to her western birth or eastern training, I will leave you to decide, contenting myself with stating the fact that she and Mrs. Murray were born in Sandusky City, Ohio.

"Kittie's going to join our Sabbath School," she said, coming with me next Sunday, "ain't you Kittie?"
"Oh! I don't know, I've never been to Sabbath School—what do you have to do?"
"Why, get saved, of course—and books and all that."— "I mean, what do you have to do—do you have to study anything?"
"Oh! it isn't like that. It's like church, you know. When you first go in, you have to put your head down and pray."
"But I can't pray," said heathen Kittie, "I don't know how."
"Oh! well, do as I do. Shut your eyes and count fifty."

"La, me!" sighed Mrs. Partington: "Here I have been suffering the big-nosed death for three mortal weeks. First, I was seized with a blood-spitting phlegm in the hamphire of the brain which was excruciated by the left ventricle of the heart. This gave me inflammation of the left brain, and now I am sick with the chloroform morbus. There is no blessing like that of health, particularly when you're ill."

A Georgia editor, describing a wedding lately, said the bride looked a very ill, and in the golden glimmer of some evening lake—a foam flecked snow, yet sun-faded, crowning the ripples of some soft Southern sea. If that were really so the bridegroom must have been very much puzzled to know whether he was wedding a submarine counter-espionage or an aurora borealis.

"Colonel W— is a fine looking man," said Jenkins.
"Yes," said Noggins, "I was taken for him once."
"You! why you are as ugly as a mud fence!"
"I can't help that; I was taken for him. I endorsed his note, and was taken for him by the sheriff."

The Turks have but little need of newspapers. When anything happens it is told to the women, and it circulates like air in a gale of wind. The Turks are behind the western nations in many things, but certainly they have the most beautiful circulating medium in the world.

An Irish physician was called to examine the corpse of another Irishman, who had been murdered by some of his countrymen. "This person," said he, after inspecting the body, "was so ill that if he had not been murdered, he would have died half an hour before."

Albany wants a local poet, says an exchange. Soon after she gets him she will wish somebody else wanted him.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This miasmation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the crisis. But in this effort it fails. The virus follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through that great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.

We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflicting disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to the patient subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chills, Fever, Dumb, or Malarial Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysteria, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to respond more or less to the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habituated to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "Ague Cure" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a safer as well as a surer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the malarious infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

has won for itself such a renown for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtues, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.
